The Center for Services Leadership

The Center for Services Leadership (CSL) in the W. P. Carey School of Business at Arizona State University is a world-renowned, globally recognized research and education center devoted to the science of service. With its unique structure, the CSL provides industry and academic leaders the opportunity to network, to engage, to focus and to discover more about service and services—and their potential competitive advantages.

Becoming a CSL Member

The CSL's member firms are key partners and investors in the Center who take advantage of its offerings at a high level and who are committed to advancing service knowledge. Each company or organization has a reputation for excellence as either a service firm or a product/manufacturing firm that also strategically leverages service offerings. A diverse membership stimulates a variety of opinions and ideas, so the Center values and searches for a balance of firms across a broad scope of industries.

Each member company, through discussions with Center leaders, selects one high-level executive to join the CSL Board of Advisors. The Board's meetings provide a rare opportunity for members to learn from executives in other industries who share a commitment to developing competitive advantages through service. This unique model of networking and idea generation isn't possible in standard industry-specific affiliations.

Advisory Board Member Titles

"The Center for Services Leadership has the best mix of academic and leading-edge research, along with member companies that share common challenges such as growing their service business or learning how to price or implement services within their organizations. The learnings and return from the energy and enthusiasm for service within the CSL are invaluable."

Cody Phipps - President and CEO, Owens & Minor

CSL Membership Benefits

Board members and their firms who join and support the Center for Services Leadership at Arizona State University secure direct and immediate benefits, including:
